

ABDUL

This book is set in Saudi Arabia, taking in the first Gulf War. When John Williams takes up a post as an Industrial Electrical Technician at a Saudi power station, he has little idea of what is in store. He is soon to become a teacher, and the career of his pupil, Abdul, will depend almost completely on the quality of his teaching. In this occasionally didactic narrative, the author builds up a camaraderie between the two men, and shows how the relationship is mutually beneficial, enabling both to learn new skills. When Abdul's learning is put on hold to enable him to fight in the first Gulf War, pupil and teacher realise how important their friendship has become. The author also highlights the difficulties some expats encounter with differing personalities among their own nationals and others.
