

1916 (The War Years Book 3)

Monotony on the Western Front sets in, only for it to be shattered by the arrival of Edward Warren, Jacks villainous father. Within days, Edward seeks to weaken and destroy the friendships 16-year-old Danny Keeton has built with his family and friends. On the Western Front Danny discovers the class system and an obsession with reaching the upper echelons of British society is alive and well. Edward ropes him into a deadly game that could cost him everything hes managed to hold together so far. As Danny tries to manage Edward and his long distance relationship with his girlfriend Coralie, the bombs and the shrapnel seem to be getting too close to comfort. Will the last big push on the Somme of 1916 be Dannys final ever push?
