

Petes Story - The Museum of Fractured Lives

Petes Story - The Museum of Fractured Lives Petes Story is the third in The Museum of Fractured Lives series. The cafe in the Museum of Fractured Lives is a place for sharing secrets and exploring painful memories. Pete donates a cassette tape to the Museum but he needs some persuading to tell its story. He hides behind dark glasses, fearful of his true identity being revealed. Pete tells how he fell in love with Sarah almost thirty years ago when he was twenty-one. At the time he was singing in a band and living in a bedsit. Sarah was eighteen and had just left school. They planned their life together. Sarah would manage the band and it would become a worldwide success. But the couples future goes awry The Museum of Fractured Lives displays objects donated by people who have suffered a trauma in their lives. The objects are a symbol of that trauma. When accepting a donation, the museum employees try to obtain the full story behind the object. Each book in The Museum of Fractured Lives series tells the story of one donated object and the person who has given it. This is a flash novella of approximately 9,000 words. Readers Favorite said of Maxines Story: Sally Jenkins has established a classic with her flash novella, Maxines Story. It is inventive, intriguing and inspired; Sally Jenkins and her Museum of Fractured Lives is certain to be a hit. Readers Favorite said of Karens Story: Sally Jenkins has done it again! Karens Story is even better than the first. With an excellent concept, Sally is causing quite a wave with her stories of betrayal and guilt. These are brilliantly written accounts with a special twist in the telling that draws the reader right into the drama Sally Jenkins is a British author who specialises in shorter length fiction.
