

The Dragon

I think that Shvarts is becoming a literary classic. When we stage a classic, we should consider its status at the present time. But to adapt a classic to the petty phenomenon of `today is trivial. I propose to stage THE DRAGON about human dignity. The kingdom of the Dragon left behind corrupt souls, wherein dragonets dwell. To kill the dragon dwelling inside us all is Shvarts concept. One must extirpate the evil the dragon leaves behind him. To confront all the complexities of the work means staging the fairy tale as a fairy tale, and anyone who wants to draw conclusions will draw them for himself. We will not allude to the past, because that's cheap and dissipates the theme, which is important and meant for `tomorrow . The Dragon will not have a Georgian accent. Human feeling must be deep and realistic. The most fantastic characters must be, as in a psychological drama, characterized by psychological depth--something between Dostoevsky and Anatole France. A deadly earnest attitude to all the fantasy is absolutely necessary. Just as it is in the author. Here the passions are original and powerful. Not a single role can be played as a joke. --The director, Nikolay Akimov, addressing the actors before rehearsing the first production of THE DRAGON at the Leningrad Comedy Theater in 1961
