

Trace of Survival II, Volume 2

Eight years have passed since the collapse of the society and the economy. Gone were the days of abundant and easily attainable daily living needs, electronic devices, the power grid and millions of automobiles and the fuel to power them. People were now living mostly like the old pioneers along the Trace and the surrounding areas. They work hard and fight for survival. They are still finding new ways to make life livable. In other parts of the country and the world things aren't any better. Family members of residents of the villages in the area have not been heard from for years and some want to find if they still live. Trish and Toni have been separated from their parents and siblings since the Collapse. They feel that it is time to make a trip and find them. They all lived in Georgia right before the Collapse. They and their husbands will take their kids along with Isaiah and Nettie. Will they be successful in their search and what else will they encounter?
