

Hawks of outremer

Halt! The bearded man-at-arms swung his pike about, growling like a surly mastiff. It paid to be wary on the road to Antioch. The stars blinked redly through the thick night and their light was not sufficient for the fellow to make out what sort of man it was who loomed so gigantically before him. An iron-clad hand shot out suddenly and closed on the soldiers mailed shoulder in a grasp that numbed his whole arm. From beneath the helmet the guardsman saw the blaze of ferocious blue eyes that seemed lambent, even in the dark. Saints preserve us! gasped the frightened man-at-arms, Cormac FitzGeoffrey! Avaunt! Back to Hell with ye, like a good knight! I swear to you, sir-- Swear me no oaths, growled the knight. What is this talk? Are you not an incorporeal spirit? mouthed the soldier. Were you not slain by the Moorish corsairs on your homeward voyage?
