

Caleb Williams (Annotated): Or, Things as They Are (Essential Gothic Classics)

Caleb Williams is a poor orphan who is employed as a secretary for the wealthy and benevolent country squire, Fernando Falkland. Falkland is subject to unexplained fits of melancholy, and soon Caleb becomes convinced that the squire must be hiding a dark secret. Caleb's obsession with uncovering the truth proves to be the beginning of a thrilling and disastrous train of events in which he is relentlessly pursued by the vindictive Falkland. The novel, Caleb Williams, earned the title of first psychological thriller because of the power of this vengeful pursuit of an innocent man by a man of power. Godwin wrote the novel with the intention of exposing the corrupt hierarchies of the day. He was a champion of liberty and a great advocate of the importance of rational thinking. The Monmouth Press edition is from an original 1832 edition in which Godwin revised and corrected the novel as it was first published in 1794. A preface and the author's memoirs are also included.
