

I Now Pronounce You Husband and Wives (The Bird Watcher Book 10)

After years of military service to the Country of Andino, Fred Miller and his family consisting of his wife, Vanesa (a former beauty contest winner), and two children, Liliana and Freddie, move to the new nation of Independence Island in the Caribbean Sea. His military record is soon discovered and the President of the Country asks him to form a small military unit, a battalion of eventually 800 soldiers, to protect the country. Soon after the family arrived in this beautiful island nation off the coast of Venezuela, Fred and Vanesa discover that it has two very interesting laws in its Constitution, namely, polygamy is permitted and extradition is forbidden. Fred left some wonderful people in his previous military unit, especially a beauty contest winner who was his secretary, Olivia Duarte. She was later raped and her husband killed. Then she was raped again by an army official whom she killed. When Fred learns of this, he immediately calls for her to move to live with his family. She quickly leaves Andino and joins the Miller family in their beautiful home on the coast of Independence Island. Fred would not consider polygamy unless his wife Vanesa agrees to it as well. She does wholeheartedly and Fred immediately marries his secretary Olivia who has twins by this time due to being raped by the army official. Thus begins a pattern of marriages by General Fred Miller to other beautiful women who are highly trained in a variety of professions, such as: military officers, secretaries, a judge, and a nurse. The family had agreed that the number of wives will be capped at seven. But this doesn't stop little Liliana, Fred's young daughter, from her favorite marriage activity, that of hiding in the towel closet and watching her father with his new bride. Once discovered, she is always invited into bed for a few minutes to warm up. Then her dad tells her to scoot and get downstairs into her own bed in her mothers bedroom. This leads to a jump into bed with mom. Over the years, the children grow and the family obtains improved housing on the beach front. When Freds now 13-year old daughter showing the beauty traits of her mother is kidnapped by the Unamara Indians, Fred and a few of his most loyal soldiers head into the Amazon Rainforest. This is not the first time that General Miller has had to lead a contingent of soldiers into the jungle. During the Presidents absence from Andino, the Vice President, always a detractor of General Miller, has him kidnapped along with one of his wives, Judge Ana Maria, and put on a plane heading back to Andino to be tried and executed immediately before the President can even learn about it. On the flight to Andino, Fred draws from his ankle holster his small pistol, shoots two guards and the officer in charge, and pushes their dead bodies out of the airplane. A short talk with the two pilots reveals that they were not happy to get this assignment. They help Fred and his wife by dropping down to 10,000 feet over the Rainforest and slowing down to 100 miles per hour. Thus Fred and Judge Ana Maria bail out into the black of night floating slowly down to the great canopy of the Rainforest. The judge whose professional life has kept her inside finally has the opportunity for an exciting activity like the other women have had. When the President returns to Andino, he communicates with the President of Independence Island. Helicopters are sent on a search for Fred and Ana Maria. They are successful in locating and bringing the two back to Independence Island. Later Freds 13 year-old daughter, Liliana, is kidnapped to marry the son of the chief of the Unamara Indian Tribe. Once again, Fred and a few loyal soldiers head for the Amazon Rainforest. After finding and rescuing Liliana, the group fights off jaguars and a dangerous anaconda snake. Eventually thought they return home with Liliana in good shape.
