

Shanghai Mission (Navy SEAL Grant Stevens Book 6)

After his last emotional, haunting mission, Captain Grant Stevens had come to a difficult decision. Retire from the Navy. But a few months later, an intriguing proposition was extended to him. Equipment, transportation, salaries, money in offshore accounts would be supplied by four wealthy individuals, every mission sanctioned by the President of the United States. All Stevens had to do: organize a Team comprised of former Navy SEALs. Team AlphaTango. Three months after the Teams first mission in Nicaragua, the men are called into action again. This new mission will send them into uncharted territory. Communist China. The mission: rescue two captured Navy SEALs, their brothers-in-arms. But an already dangerous op turns into more than the men bargained for when they learn that two canisters of plutonium were stolen from the Huludao Shipyard. The canisters location? Unknown. But A.T. fears whoever has them is preparing for an attack on the U.S. Vice President during his visit to Shanghai. Team A.T. will have one shot at finding the SEALs and the plutonium. One shot at preventing the attack. One shot at getting out of China alive.
