

Shakespeares Opposites: The Admirals Company 1594-1625

The Admirals Men is the acting company that staged Christopher Marlowes plays while its companion company was giving the first performances of Shakespeare. Unlike the Shakespeare company, there is plenty of evidence available telling us what the Admirals company did and how it staged its plays. Not only do we know far more about the design of its two playhouses, the Rose and the Fortune, than we know of any other playhouse from the time, including the Globe, but we have Henslowes Diary. This recorded everything the Admirals company performed from 1594 to 1600 and after, what the company bought to stage its plays, who performed which parts, who wrote which plays and even how much they were paid. The first history to be written of the Admirals Men, this book tells us not only a great deal about the companys own work, but also how the Shakespeare company operated.
