

Assignment in Samarra

I will not die in this God-forsaken hell hole for some fanatics who hate what my country stands for and for whom many good American men and women died to make them free? For Vietnam veteran Jack Spraggins, it was D?j? Vu, Vietnam. He knew that he and his six team members were in a tight spot as soon as the ambush on his convoy in the ancient city of Samarra, Iraq, was over. It only took seconds for three security vehicles and their occupants to be completely destroyed, but the two vehicles carrying his team were virtually untouched in the ambush. He rushed his people to the roof of an abandoned building in order to survey the scene and plan for the immediate future. Spraggins and his teams salvation would come in what he found on that rooftop and in a providential sandstorm. And in the process he learns a lot about himself, his teammates, and his enemy.
