

Destroy Glasnost Island

Can a young woman a chaste village pharmacist become an international glamour girl and help save the worlds three biggest countries from nuclear attack and in the process become the torrid lover of a round-the-world yachtsman? Top Dog in Washington, the Prime Minister in London and the President in Russia all depend on assistance from the two young lovers to locate a secret unknown island and prevent it from becoming a nuclear missile launching pad. An international group of nuclear scientists plans to develop the site and intimidate the Big Three into sharing the wealth of their massive trading deals. Non-compliance would result in nuclear missiles being launched against London, Washington and Moscow. The yachtsman once found refuge on the island after being ship-wrecked and knows its features and the girl is an international campaigner who discourages any international interest in exploiting the worlds remaining undeveloped areas. They can help the heads of government to damp down any interest in the island by campaigning in the United Nations and by helping British and American intelligence officers to plan an assault to destroy any military installations on the island. Despite the loss of an Anglo-American submarine and its crew that had been probing the islands defences before missiles could be installed, the main assault force is to go ahead. A complication is a vulgar international holiday tycoon who has heard whispers of the island and plans to locate and develop it. He is not aware that the forgotten island had become a secret refuge for unwanted political agitators mostly from Russia when World War 2 ended. With the passage of years and inevitable deaths of the agitators, all official interest in the island was lost and it was largely forgotten. The tycoon is bought off by the grant of an honour. Ultimately, complete surprise enables the assault force to plant powerful delayed action bombs in all the underground installations and kill all the technicians and their supporting military unit. The exercise seems to have been a complete success with only one casualty. He is the young yachtsman, and doctors struggle to try and save his life. In the midst of all the political intrigue a deep love affair develops between the yachtsman and the young woman. Their devotion amazes everyone who knew the girl who was always regarded as being without much emotion. As her infatuation increases her basic reactions emerge and sleeping desires awaken into a surprising frenzy of unbridled passion. This outburst of unrequited love seems to be very infectious and others involved in the international drama also become involved. One victim of Cupids dart is the British Intelligence Officer whose cool, restrained professionalism is stirred into feverish love for his long-time secretary.
