

The Sunbird

Chris Ryan, itinerant stonemason, now working quietly in the terraced hills of Portugal, may have imagined a peaceful life. But the mysterious woman from his past, whose emails grow ever more perplexing, is about to change all that. This time she is phoning from France and is desperate they meet up. What has she found in the cathedral city of Chartres that might unravel the mystery that her life has become? What is the secret about stones that she knows, but which has escaped him? By the time he realizes she is more than she appears, their lives are entangled. Uncovering secrets, it seems, is her forte, and a centuries-old and deadly conspiracy is now her passion. Her far-flung quest has become his too a quest now perilous, and destined to end in the unlikeliest of places.

A contemporary story, The Sunbird is also visionary and metaphysical, an intricate and moving exploration of the dark ends to which we are drawn when the nobility of the feminine spirit is crushed. Both tragic and heartening, it is a redemptive myth for our times.
