Its an unco business, leddie. Mary. O father, father, if you could hear! What are you? What are you to--him? Jean. I be the best frien at ever he had; for, O dear leddie, I wad gie my bluid to help him, though it sets me ill to say it to your face. Mary. And the--the child? Jean. The bairn? Mary. Nothing--O nothing! I am in trouble, and I know not what I say. And I cannot help you, I cannot help you if I would. He told me he was not for anything to be disturbed. And indeed I have tried--and O I think I shall lose my mind! What is this grief that is coming on us all? You know--you can tell me if you would; and as for me, I hear nothing but threats, and meet nothing but mysteries; and my heart shudders in my breast. Jean. Ay, its unco business. Mary. His father is dying within there--dying, I tell you--dying! Jean. Its mebbe just as weel. Mary. Well? Well? Has it come to that? O Walter, Walter, come back, come back, or I shall die! Jean. Hes comin, leddie. Im awa. Mary. Why should you? Stay and speak to me before him. Jean. Na, na, hes your jo. He maunna see ye speakin wi the likes o me. (She goes out.) Mary. What does it mean? What does it mean? SCENE III Mary, Leslie, Doctor. Leslie. Heres the doctor, Mary. Mary. Doctor, he is very ill. (They enter the house.) SCENE OPENS TABLEAU X At Bay The Stage represents the Deacons room, as in Tableau I. and IV. Fire-light. Stage dark. A pause. Then knocking at the door, C; cries without of Willie! Mb. Bbodie! Bbodie! The door is burst open. SCENE I Mary, Leslie, Doctor; with lights Doctor. The chamber is unoccupied. Mary. Dead, and he not here. Doctor. The bed has not been slept in. The counterpane is not turned down. Mary. It is not true, it cannot be true. Doctor. My dear
