

Three Short Plays

If you are an amateur theatre group, or performing arts school, or professional theatre, and wish to put any of my plays on the stage, please contact me at <mailto:pen.avram@gmail.com> and I will include in the published book the credits of the first production in full. There are no charges whatsoever. Both plays, The Cemetery and The Confession, should be performed together in one evening, as a double-bill. The Cemetery as the first, followed after the usual intermission by The Confession. TRENT in these plays is the same actor. Each play is performed without an intermission. The scenes are changed quickly in the full view of the audience, which is entertained by the Art of the Fugue by J.S.Bach. THE CONFESSION The hero is haunted by his memories from the past. He tries desperately to escape from them. What happens at the end? It is the first play in a double-bill, the second being The Cemetery, also published on Amazon and Smashwords. THE CEMETERY The hero is obsessed with a need of a vengeance for his suffering in his youth. The pursuit brings him to a cemetery and to acquaintance with a graveyard-keeper. The play has two acts. It is the second play in a double-bill, the first being The Confession, also published on Amazon and Smashwords. MEMBRANE Ideally the play should be performed in a real pub, with the audience comprising regular patrons. This would ensure that the audience is appropriately mature. From the mind that brought us Hendrych and Kroupa comes another unconventional adult night at the theatre. They say, In vino veritas... and a student reunion puts the old saying to the test. But as the gathering gets drunker by the minute, the truth serum kicks in with devastating results for at least one person at the table.
