

Wreckage Begins with W: Cartoons of the Bush Administration

JEFF DANZIGER IS an independent political cartoonist whose work appears in hundreds of newspapers around the world via the New York Times Syndicate. He draws from six to ten cartoons a week on a wide variety of subjects, from international folly to Hollywood hubris. An equal opportunity satirist, he is politically to the left of Genghis Kahn everyone and everything is fair game. His dark drawings, pull-no-punches humor, and Danziger signature line are instantly recognizable to any regular reader of newspaper opinion pages. As with any great political humorist, Danzigers funniest creations lampoon the most deadly serious subjects. Created in the heat of the moment and collected here for the first time, Danzigers cartoons of George W. Bushs ascent to the White House and first term in office amount to a highly entertaining excursion through the national and international political landscape of the past four years. Wreckage Begins with W showcases a singular wit and an artist of uncanny prescience.
